Alliance Computer Services is looking for small businesses who rely heavily on e-mail, the internet, a robust network, and industry specific software to run their business effectively.

Typically these offices have between five and fifty workstations and one or more servers. Our clients hire us to support all of their information technology needs because they can not afford the financial burden of a full time IT staff. Many times the most experienced computer user gets tasked with the brunt of computer questions and problems. This not only hinders their ability to do their job, in many cases computer issues get worse when not handled properly. This is where we step in.

We can offer a range of services and plans to fit any budget.

Our clients quickly see successes in many following once we are hired:

- Using technology as a powerful tool for increasing productivity and gaining competitive advantages.
- Improving the productivity, profitability, and operations of their business through technology.
- Increased reliability and security from their computer network.
- Investing in technology to improve communication and eliminate manual tasks.
